M.U. MEAT-CLASS ROOM
MAKES COOL IMPRESSION

Saws-boarding-housekeepers-pails of lard-professors-turkeys-cleavers-more saws-smell of raw meat-scales-housewife jargon-quarters of beef-spoons-bones-hatchets—all this is not a Nick Carter novel nor a futurist painting, but the impression one receives of the class that slaughters, cures and cuts meat in Schweitzer Hall.

The impression comes only after one has been half-frozen and made sluggish by air cooled to 26 degrees, filled with chemicals and plentifully supplied with ether. When one's blood begins to thaw and the fumes become less powerful, one can see things in detached divisions once more and learn how the ice machine refrigerates the meat that is cut and sold by the students to anyone who wishes to buy.

Prof. L. D. Haigh, professor of agricultural chemistry, explains that the ice-making method is that of molecular velocity. The molecular velocity of the gas is lessened by compression and then increased in the refrigerator pipes when the pressure is lightened. The gas expansion cools the air. When fifteen or so newly-killed hogs are to be brought in from the University farm, the temperature of the refrigerator must be lowered considerably, as the heat absorbed from the meat warms the air.

In one part of the room a young woman is buying a chop with as speculating an air as if she were a broker investing in U. S. Steel; in another part a man interested in soils is explaining to a friend the excellency of bones for fertilizing the garden; and there a thrifty housekeeper is trudging up the stairs with a heavy pall of lard.

The man who, to illustrate the high cost of living, tells how he once put the package of meat in his pocket-book and kept the change of a nickel the butcher had given him in his hand, would be jeered at by the satisfied customers of this impromptu meat shop; for the cuts are as generous as they are choice.

PATRIOTISM COSTLY TO HEANY

On Border Duty; Kentucky Farmer Loses His "Oldest Gal."

(United Press Staff Correspondent) EL PASO, Dec. 9.—This is the story of Heany, the private, and the price he is paying for his patriotism. It is a story for the guardsman's folks back home who think they have suffered hardship on account of his border duty.

"Americans Massacred at Carrizal" was the headline that sought Heany out in the mountains of McGoffin County, Ky. It had been a lifetime struggle to wring a living from the ungrateful soil of the stony slopes where he had toiled since childhood. Bit by bit he had bought the half barren farm, married and raised five children.

"It plumb broke him up" when his wife died, but "the oldest gal" helped with the little brood and they managed to get the spring crops in. He had his hands more than full at home, but his grandfather fought in the Revolution and his father was in the Union army; and when the President's call for men came, Heany went. Heany went around to the neighbors who each agreed to take one of the children until he came back. One by one Heany took the little ones to the neighbors and kissed them good by. Then he went away.

On the border Heany drilled in the hot sun, following his monotonous duties grimly. His comrades said he was "queer." They didn't know.

Perhaps Colonel Gullion is the only man on the border who knows the whole story. Heany told him when word came that his "oldest gal" had run away. Heany wanted to go home, and the Colonel would like to send him, but the Government has no time for the heartaches of an atom in its war machine.

TO SIDETRACK NEWLAND REPORT

Congress Will Get Ready to Carry Out Its Railroad Program.

By United Press WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—To give the Administration a completely clear track for carrying out its railroad program, it was practically decided today to sidetrack the hearings of the Newland's joint committee, which has been investigating railroad and other public utilities problems. It is understood that Senator Newland will suggest to Congress Monday that the report of the committee be postponed until after March 4.

The largest CHEESE ever exhibited in Columbia, a soft, smooth, rich, full cream cheese, having all the appetizing flavor, delicate richness and creamy consistency that comes with right curing, and the larger the cheese the better.

It requires ten pounds of pure rich milk to make one pound of cheese, and Monarch Cheese is the finest produced in America. It is made from the milk of prize dairy cows on model farms, where the meadows grow green and sweet and the milk is always rich and fine.

A cow will give an average of twenty pounds of milk per day. On that basis this Blue Ribbon Giant contains the milk given by 258 cows in one day or 5,160 pounds of milk.

We were extremely fortunate in buying early which enables us to sell this remarkable cheese at 35c per pound, or in other words what you pay for ordinary cheese. We are now booking orders. The Cheese will be cut in about 10 days or just before Christmas.
